Citation and Reference : (APA-modified Form)

For citations, the writer should indicate the name of the author, year, title and page number in parentheses following the reference in the text. If the name of the author is part of the text, the writer needs only parenthesize the year of publication and page following the author's name.

Examples of the citation in the text are: Vinten (1990: 125-36) has provided a working definition of social audit: A review to ensure that an organization gives due consideration to its wider and social responsibilities to those both directly and indirectly affected by its decisions, and that a balance is achieved in its corporate planning between these aspects and the more traditional business-related objectives.

The next definition gives prominence to the measurement of social impact: The social audit is an attempt by an individual corporation to measure its performance in an area where it is making a social impact...an attempt to identify, measure, evaluate, report and monitor the effects a corporation is having on society that are not covered in the traditional financial reports [7, p.]. (Buchholz, 1982: 499). Consider the difficulties with measurement in the audit. While a single measuring rod would be ideal (given our obsession for the big number like the gross domestic product figure or the employment rate). This is not realistic and multiple measures must be used. Should the measurement be input or output oriented? (Buchholz, 1982: 500) Do we utilize, for example, pollution control expenditures (inputs) or do we estimate reduction in pollution (output)? The Secretary of Commerce once proposed the creation of a corporate social index to estimate the social performance of firms over time, but little came of this [8, p. 131]. (Buchholz, 1989: 131)

Publishing Ethics

The Journal of Mekong Societies is committed to upholding the standards of ethical behavior at all stages of the publication process. All concerned parties, particularly the editors, reviewers, and authors must adhere to the following ethical guidelines.

The Editors

Editors should give prompt and unbiased consideration to all manuscripts submitted for publication.

The editors' judgement should be based on merit without regard to race, gender, religious belief, ethnic origin, nationality, or political ideology of the authors. Intellectual independence of the authors must be respected.

The editors and the editorial staff should not disclose any information about a manuscript under consideration to anyone other than the reviewers and potential reviewers.

Editors should ensure a timely double-blind peer review by qualified reviewers who have no conflict of interest with the authors.

The Reviewers

Reviewers should keep all information about the authors and the manuscripts confidential.

Reviewers should inform the editor-in-chief of any conflict of interest resulting from direct competition, collaboration or relationship with any of the authors, and withdraw their services for the manuscript.

Reviews should be conducted objectively based on the quality of the manuscript. Reviewers should provide clear, constructive and timely feedback to the editors.

Reviewers should inform the editor-in-chief of any substantial similarity or overlap between the manuscript under review and any other published papers, and of any suspected malpractice, such as falsification or fabrication of data.

The Authors

Authors should ensure that all work in their submitted manuscript is original. Any part of the submitted manuscript derived from prior published work, including work by the same author, must be properly cited. All forms of plagiarism, including self-plagiarism, are prohibited.

Authors must not submit a manuscript that has already been published or that is being submitted to other journals.

All authors mentioned in the paper must have significantly contributed to the research and the manuscript production.

Authors must declare all sources of research grants.

Authors must strictly follow the Journal's Author Guidelines. Authors whose native language is not English should have the manuscript edited by a native speaker of English.
